A spring is an elastic object that stores mechanical energy. Springs are typically made of spring steel. There are many spring designs. In everyday use, the term often refers to coil springs. When a conventional spring, without stiffness variability features, is compressed or stretched from its resting position, it exerts an opposing force approximately proportional to its change in length ...

Extension springs are helical springs designed to store energy and resist a pulling force. The spring used on a screen door is good example of the most common extension spring.

A piston ring is a split ring that fits into a groove on the outer diameter of a piston in a reciprocating engine such as an internal combustion engine or steam engine. The main functions of piston rings in reciprocating engines are: Sealing the combustion chamber so that there is minimal loss of gases to the crank case.

Note: If you are not all familiar with basic electronics, you might find it easier to understand this chapter if you read chapter 12 first. The pulsed devices mentioned so far have had moving parts but rotating or fluctuating magnetic fields can be created without moving parts.
