A variable speed of light (VSL) is a feature of a family of hypotheses stating that the speed of light in vacuum, usually denoted by c , may in some way not be constant, e.g. varying in space or time, or depending on frequency. A variable speed of light occurs in some situations of classical physics as equivalent formulations of accepted theories, but also in various alternative theories of ...

Resistance, Ohm's Law, and the Temperature of a Light Bulb

A light bulb is a device that produces light from electricity. In addition to lighting a dark space, they can be used to show an electronic device is on, to direct traffic, for heat, and many other purposes. Billions are in use, some even in outer space. Early people used candles and oil lamps for light. Crude incandescent lights were made in the early and middle 19th century but had little use.
